

FOUR WOMEN SHOT AND MAN'S SKULL FRACTURED

Joseph. Weber Cuts Loose in Mapleton With a Shotgun, Following a Family Feud of Long Standing -- Two Victims Likely to Die.

Charles Elmendorf, colored, who has acted as janitor for the Cordis office buildings uptown for a number of years, is suffering from a fractured skull from which he probably will not recover, and Mrs. George Halstead, white, is in a serious condition from gunshot wounds as the result of an attack made on four women at Mapleton Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

The Wounded.
Besides Elmendorf and Mrs. Halstead, those who were injured were: Mrs. Louise Elmendorf, wife of Charles Elmendorf. Gunshot wounds in the right side, penetrating deep in the abdomen. Shot may have penetrated the intestines.
Miss Anna Halstead. Gunshot wounds in her right leg, arm and face.

Mrs. Lola Herrick, sister of Mrs. Halstead. Gunshot wounds in the head and neck.
Mrs. Elmendorf is suffering from gunshot wounds in her right side.
Elmendorf and Mrs. Halstead are being cared for at the Benedictine Sanitarium. The others were taken to the sanitarium, where their wounds were dressed, and afterwards were taken to their home on Snyder avenue.

Weber Fired Without Warning.
Weber discharged his shotgun at the four women without warning while they were seated on the porch of the Elmendorf house on Snyder avenue at 5:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. When Elmendorf appeared on the street from his house, evidently for the purpose of protecting the women from further assault, Weber clubbed his gun and broke it over his head, fracturing his skull. Then using the butt as a club, he pounded Elmendorf's skull until the scalp was torn loose in half a dozen places and he had lost consciousness.

Assault Follows -- Long Standing Trouble.
Weber's assault on the four women followed trouble which has existed for a long time between himself and the Elmendorf family. Elmendorf lived in a house which he owned at the end of Snyder avenue, which extends parallel with Hurley avenue near the city limits. The next house on the avenue is that which Weber and his wife have occupied for several years. The house was about five feet distant from the Elmendorf house.

Elmendorf's family consisted of himself and his wife and two adopted children. The pranks of the children have created disturbances in Mapleton from time to time, especially with Weber, and on numerous occasions the children, Mrs. Elmendorf and Weber have aired their differences in the recorder's court. Elmendorf sometimes appeared in court but there never was any complaint against him and no evidence was ever given that he took a hand in the trouble except in order to protect his family.

The principal differences between Weber and the Elmendorfs have arisen over chickens owned by the respective families.
Weber's Grievance Wednesday Morning.
On Wednesday morning Weber appeared before Recorder Lang and asked for a warrant for the arrest of the Elmendorf children, whom he accused of having strung fish lines, to which fish hooks were attached, across the walk on Snyder avenue where he would be certain to get his feet entangled. The warrant was refused because he did not give the Elmendorf children had strung the lines.

Weber Drank in Afternoon.
In the afternoon Weber was drunk and is said to have been drinking heavily. He was seen by various people staggering along the streets about five o'clock, when he started for his home.
He reached his house about 5:30 o'clock and remained in the house only a few minutes. When he emerged from the house he was carrying a single-barrel shotgun.

Shot at Angle Sweeping Porch.
He started in the direction of the Elmendorf house, carrying the gun, and when about twenty-five feet away he raised the gun to his shoulder and fired. Weber's position when he fired was such that his gun was at an angle that practically swept the porch and this explains why the four women who were sitting there all received a part of the charge of shot.

Mrs. Halstead was nearest to Weber when he fired, and most of the shot entered her body. Mrs. Elmendorf was next, and part of the charge also entered her side. The other women were further away and their injuries were slighter because the shot scattered before reaching them.

The attack had been so unexpected that the women had no time to seek safety in flight. As soon as they were shot they ran screaming into the house. Blood trailed from them along the porch and into the house.

Elmendorf had returned to his house a short time before Weber arrived home, and when Weber fired Elmendorf was in the rear of his home. When he heard the gun discharged and the screams of the women, he walked around the house to the front, and went to the street, where Weber was still standing with the shotgun in his hands.

As Elmendorf approached, Weber clubbed the gun and brought the stock down on Elmendorf's head with sufficient force to break it at its connection with the barrel and to bend the trigger guard. Elmendorf dropped to the roadway, but Weber bent over him and with the broken butt pounded Elmendorf's head.

Neighbors are in doubt whether Weber returned to his own house or whether he started immediately toward Washington avenue. Word of the shooting had been telephoned to police headquarters, where Chief Wood despatched Sergeant Hanley and two patrolmen in the patrol wagon to the scene of the shooting, and also notified Policeman Kuehn, whom he summoned by the emergency signal to the call box at the corner of Clinton avenue and Pearl street. Patrolman Kuehn impressed Howard Legg and his automobile into service and met Weber on Hurley avenue near the residence of Owen Cassidy.

Weber was carrying his broken shotgun and as Patrolman Kuehn placed him under arrest he said: "You've got the goods on me. I was just going to give myself up." Patrolman Kuehn took Weber to jail, where an empty shell was found in his pocket.

Victims Taken to Sanitarium.
The five victims of Weber's assault were taken to the Benedictine Sanitarium, where they were attended by Dr. Mark O'Meara, Dr. Fred Snyder and Dr. F. B. Quinlan.

Elmendorf was found to be suffering from a severe fracture of the skull, and at 8:30 o'clock in the evening underwent an operation by Drs. O'Meara, Snyder and Quinlan.

Elmendorf's condition was stated to be the same as it had been. He is not expected to recover.

Of the other victims, Mrs. Halstead was found to have been the most seriously injured and her condition remains serious. The danger to her is from infection or peritonitis. The other women were not injured as seriously and after having their wounds dressed and antitoxin administered they were allowed to return to their homes.

Elmendorf Well Known And Well Liked.
Charles Elmendorf was one of the best known men in town, and was regarded as one of the most accommodating and obliging as well as inoffensive men to be found anywhere.

He was about fifty years old. For a number of years he was employed as a driver by the late J. Scott Smith when he was engaged in the milk business, and Mr. Smith had implicit confidence in him.

After Mr. Smith's death he was employed by the late Senator John N. Cordis as janitor of the Cordis building on Wall street and later as janitor of the Cordis building on Fair street. He also assisted in the care of the Kingston Opera House building and besides was employed in winter to attend to the furnaces of fifteen or sixteen families in the uptown section.

The experience of everyone who had dealings with Elmendorf was the same. He was never impatient but on the contrary was quiet-spoken and always polite. For tenants he was always obliging and accommodating and having had an early religious training which he followed throughout his life he often quoted an explanation for his never-failing good nature that "a soft answer turneth away wrath." He was active in the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church and in every way he endeavored to lead a decent and well-regulated life.

Unconcerned When Arraigned.
Seemingly unconcerned over the seriousness of his position Joseph Weber was arraigned before Recorder Lang in Recorder's court this morning charged with assault in the first degree in attempting to kill Charles Elmendorf, by beating him over the head with a shotgun. The charge was preferred by Sergeant William F. Hanley, as Elmendorf was still unconscious this morning.

Frank W. Brooks, who has been retained by Weber, entered a plea of not guilty in behalf of his client, and asked for an immediate hearing. Chief of Police Wood informed Recorder Lang that the police were not ready for the hearing today as Elmendorf was still unconscious and four of the witnesses were under the care of physicians.

By consent of both sides the hearing was adjourned to Monday morning at 9 o'clock and Weber was remanded to the county jail by Recorder Lang who stated, that considering the seriousness of the charge he would refuse to admit Weber to bail.

Information Asked About Blacklist

Washington, Aug. 10.—Agitation in congress for measures to relieve American foreign trade from the boycott imposed by the Allied blacklist today resulted in a demand that the state department furnish information as to the operation of the blacklist. Majority Leader Kitchin in an informal letter to the department asked for complete data as to the ban placed on American firms, the results of the blacklist on American business, and what steps have been taken by the executive branch of the government to meet the situation.

The Democratic house leader sent with his letter copies of the confidential blacklists, and other data submitted to him by various members of the house who are clamoring for retaliatory legislation. He likewise sent to the department a copy of the discussion of the blacklists in congress. He asked for a prompt reply, with a view to determining at once whether congress should take the matter into its own hands and pass retaliatory or relief legislation without waiting for executive action.

"I am endeavoring to secure all of the information as to the trade boycotts that I can," said the majority leader today. "It is apparent from agitation which the blacklists have caused in congress, that the matter demands attention. If the charges made by American business men are true, as represented here by members of congress, then the legislative branch of the government should look into the question. I am asking the executive branch for all information which might help in establishing the necessity for remedial legislation."

Members of congress from New York and other cities particularly affected by the blacklists have aroused a vigorous demand for action. The decision of the administration to take no aggressive steps until next winter has given rise to dissatisfaction and if the agitation continues, the house, at least, may take matters into its own hands.

Representative W. S. Bennett, author of a bill which would impose a penalty on all shipping lines discriminating as between shippers, which he says would break the boycott, declared today that his measure would pass the house before adjournment.

"This matter has aroused deep resentment," he said. "I am confident that before congress adjourns the house will pass my bill. It may be amended to provide for protection by the armed naval forces of vessels which defy the foreign blacklists, but after talking with the house leaders I am certain that we will get action."

AUSTRIAN ARMY IN FULL RETREAT

Rome, Aug. 10.—The Austrians, pursued by the Italian cavalry following the fall of Gorizia, with the capture of thousands of prisoners, are reported today to have abandoned nearly all their chief positions on the Isonzo and Carso fronts.

There is every indication other successes will follow rapidly. It is the Italian intention to clear the whole Carso Plateau of enemy troops. Occupation of Gorizia would be precarious of the Carso Plateau remained in Austrian hands, for the city is in a hollow, surrounded by steep heights on three sides and commanded by mountain peaks on the fourth.

The immediate objective of the Italians now is Trieste. There is likely, however, to be severe fighting before Trieste is taken, for the Austrians have several strong positions to fall back on and to offer a stubborn resistance.

Further reports from the fighting at Gorizia show that it was of the most desperate character. Houses were captured one after another by the Italians, and the Austrian defenders out of the windows. The castle was taken at the point of the bayonet and the Italian flag hoisted on it.

The correspondent of the Corriere d'Italia at the front writes as follows: "Gorizia's military establishments were bombarded for three days. A ring of fire encircled the city. Two buildings, housing troops, were demolished. The members of one command were all killed or wounded. The loss among the troops was heavy. The civilian population evacuated the city on Sunday."

Building Aerial Trans-Atlantic Ship
Washington, August 10.—The giant Zeppelin trans-oceanic air liners promised by Germany to help her merchant submarines defeat the purposes of the British blockade, is nearing completion near Lake Constance. Official information was received here today telling of the giant aircraft.

The passenger carrying balloon is hundreds of feet longer than the largest of the war Zeppelins which have been used in the bombardment of English and French coast towns and the air raids on London and Paris.

Inflated, the newest German product will be 787 feet in length—more than one-seventh of a mile. The giant air craft is designed to carry a dead weight load of 88,000 pounds. This is the equivalent to 680 persons of average weight.

Work on the huge passenger and baggage carrying machine is being pushed as rapidly as possible. However, the information cable here contained no accurate estimate of the probable time of the completion of the Zeppelin that is designed to break the British cordon about Germany and free German commerce.

Street Car Motor Explodes.
Chicago, August 10.—Thirty persons were injured, four of them so seriously they may not recover, when a street car motor exploded here today. Windows were blown out and the woodwork set afire. Passengers in a panic dashed for the exits and many of them were hurt. Two of the seriously injured were women. A short circuit is believed to have caused the explosion.

VOTE THIS FALL UPON CONVENTION

People to Decide Whether Constitution Shall Again be Tinkered With in 1918 and That Question Will be on Official Ballots in November.

Albany, Aug. 10.—The people of New York state are to have an opportunity this fall to say whether there shall be a constitutional convention in 1918. Under the provisions of the state constitution it is set forth that "at the general election to be held in the year 1916 and every twentieth year thereafter, and also at such times as the legislature may by law provide, the question shall there be a convention to revise the constitution and amend the same?" shall be decided by the electors of the state.

It is therefore obvious that during the fall and upon the date of the general election, this question will be submitted as a referendum. The constitutional convention held in the spring and summer of 1915 was the result of a legislative act and had the results of the delegates been substantiated, it is doubtful if the referendum which is to be submitted to the electors this November would have prevailed; the people having repudiated the proposed amendments at the polls last fall, the constitutional provision calling for a submission of the question as to whether or not there shall be a constitutional convention in 1918 naturally becomes mandatory.

Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo is at work on the ballot with reference to the referendum in question and will within a short time send it to the printer together with the other election literature which this year will be voluminous, owing to the fact that state and national officers are to be elected. It was Secretary of State Hugo who prepared the literature pertaining to the constitutional convention of 1915, though as has been pointed out, was not in the form of ballots, since the legislature provided for the convention, that body having been Democratic. The change of administration, however, placed the Republicans in power when the constitutional convention was held and made the delegate body very largely Republican.

The fact that the proposed amendments were overwhelmingly defeated last fall at the hands of the voters leaves the impression in many circles that the attitude in many circles this fall will be opposed to the holding of another constitutional convention so soon after one which resulted in nothing but expense in 1915. Prominent Republicans and Democrats alike share this view. On the other hand, the position is taken by members of both parties that the important events of the past two years make it necessary for certain drastic amendments to the constitution of New York state.

If the people of the state decide that it is necessary to hold a constitutional convention in 1918, the electors of every senate district of the state shall elect three delegates at the next ensuing general election, which would be in the fall of 1917, and the electors of the state voting at the same election shall elect fifteen delegates-at-large. The delegates to be elected shall convene at the capital on the first Tuesday in April next ensuing after their election and shall continue their session until the business of such convention shall have been completed. It will be remembered that the constitutional convention in 1915 was of many months' duration, beginning in April and ending in September.

Efforts to change the constitutional provisions have not proved popular of late, as was demonstrated when an attempt was made by the legislature to reappropriate the senate and assembly districts during the present year. The court of appeals upset the legislative act passed.

The convention is one of the largest and most enthusiastic held since the institution of the state council. Many reports relative to legislative and jurisdictional matters are being considered, both for the betterment of the carpenter and his fellow craftsman.

50 LIVES LOST IN WEST VIRGINIA FLOOD

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Charleston, W. V., Aug. 10.—With a death toll now estimated at 50, property loss of over $2,000,000 and the destruction of the homes of 10,000 persons, the greatest flood in the history of West Virginia swept through the narrow valleys of Paint Creek, Cabin Creek and Coal River. Owing to the destruction of all means of communication and the inaccessible character of the devastated region, news of the disaster did not reach the outside world until early today.

Governor H. D. Hatfield was at Huntington for the state Republican judicial convention to be held today when he was roused from his bed and told of the flood. He at once ordered the Second Regiment, W. V. N. G., now mobilized at Camp Hatfield, to the scene on a special train with tents, clothing and food supplies and left for Cabin Creek himself as quickly as possible. All wire communication with the flood-swept region is wiped out, bridges swept away, and railroad tracks destroyed. An official of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad estimated that it will be two weeks before traffic can be resumed. The yards at Kayford were transformed into a mass of debris and will have to be entirely rebuilt. It is feared that more complete reports will show that present estimates of loss of life are too small.

A report that the picnic excursion train is marooned between two points on Coal River is safe, reached here today. There is no train or wire communication with the district swept by the cloud-burst. Relief parties and newspaper men who have gone to the scene have not yet been heard from. It is necessary to travel by horseback as the roads are not passable for automobile or motorcycle.

The report that a second train is marooned at St. Albans is incorrect. St. Albans is not in the district. It is not believed here the death list will go above fifty or sixty, and that less than thirty lives have been lost. It is not possible to place an estimate on the property damage.

The West Virginia National Guard, ordered to rescue duty by Governor Hatfield, will not be able to reach the afflicted region before this afternoon. They will take food and tents for those whose homes have been carried away.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 10.—At least thirty persons were drowned in yesterday's mountain floods, according to reports reaching here this morning. Twenty-three bodies are reported to have been recovered out of Cabin Creek at the mining town of Cabin Creek, while other bodies have been recovered at points around that town.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CAN AVOID QUARANTINE

The quarantine against infantile paralysis has developed a new use for the Home Department in the Sunday schools of this county.

The children under sixteen years of age who are kept from coming to Sunday school are being enrolled in the Home Department. This movement started in the Reformed Sunday school at Shokan and is being taken by the other schools over the county.

This will serve to keep the children in touch with the lessons and thus the time will not be absolutely lost. The plan arranged is to carry the children on the Home Department roll only so long as the quarantine lasts, then transfer them back to the main school roll again.

DINNER IN THE WOODS.

When the family loses its appetite, take a well-filled basket, and after a good tramp in the woods anything will taste good.

A few good things for the basket are given herewith:

Veal Loaf.—Take three and a half pounds of finely-chopped veal, mix with three well-beaten eggs, a grated nutmeg, a tablespoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of black pepper, a tablespoonful of thyme and onion juice and a dash of cayenne. Add three tablespoonfuls of cream and three water crackers, rolled fine. Mix in a long loaf, cover with thin slices of salt pork and bake an hour, basting often. This may be sliced thin and wrapped in paraffin paper, or may be used in slices as sandwich filling.

Deviled Eggs.—Cut hard-cooked, shelled eggs lengthwise, put the yolk through sieve, add mustard, cayenne, butter and salt to taste and fill the hollow in the white even full, then the two halves may be wrapped together in paraffin paper, as they carry better, or they may be packed in a shallow box with paper between the layers.

If one has provided the equipment there is nothing more appetizing than steak at a picnic. Well seasoned with butter it is fit for a king.

Fresh scrambled eggs is another good dish; the materials and frying pan to cook them in being carried.

For a hot sandwich slice good cheese thin, place on buttered bread and make into sandwich form, then saute in a little hot butter, toasting on both sides. Serve piping hot. Grated parmesan cheese on one slice and chutney on the other, put together and fried is another good hot one.

Brown bread spread with butter and chopped green pepper, to which a little minced parsley and red pepper is added makes a nice sandwich.

Potatoes boiled, their jackets carried along, may be fried in butter to serve with the beefsteak, and little green onions will not offend anyone if eaten in the great out-of-doors.

MEDIATORS PREPARE TO ACT ON R.R. DISPUTE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, August 10.—The Federal Board of Mediation and Conciliation held a fifty-five minute meeting with the delegates of the railroad employees today at which the preliminary steps were taken to avert a strike on 225 American railroads.

After the meeting no formal statement was issued but it was reported that a definite decision in some direction might be made within twenty-four hours.

G. W. Whanger, the third member of the federal board, was asked if an appeal would be made to President Wilson but he replied that events had not proceeded to the stage where such action was necessary.

The board afterwards made preparations to hold a second conference with the railroad presidents in the afternoon.

SUMMER HOLIDAY FOR FRENCH TROOPS

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Salonica, Aug. 10.—A rather novel idea of a summer holiday for troops in the field is being realized by the French during the prevailing heat, which in treeless Macedonia is very severely felt. The officers commanding the units which are away from the frontier are ordered to arrange for ten men to have a ten days' suspension of work, so that while remaining, of course, with the regiment, all in turn will be allowed to knock off for that length of time and live under conditions of agreeable repose, reading novels, smoking cigarettes, and playing cards, as if they were staying at a holiday camp in peacetime. With proper organization the work of the various units will be carried on just the same, and there is no doubt that this measure will greatly benefit the health of the men.

In comparative freedom from malaria the army is reaping the fruits of the thorough steps taken by the medical service last spring to destroy the breeding-places of mosquitoes. A map was prepared showing every rivulet, pool and swamp. Some of the swamps were very large, being a mile or so long, but Greek labor was engaged and the whole of them were drained off into running streams. Tents were filled up and anything that could not be filled up or drained was thoroughly sprayed. Special malaria officers have been appointed for each division, who tour about constantly in the divisional areas looking for any forgotten spot where mosquitoes might still hatch out.

It is an insidious feature of the climate of Salonika that in a hot summer it has most of the characteristics of the tropics, but, owing to its being situated in Europe, life is organized as if nothing more terrible is to be expected than an English June. Sun-helmets, smoked spectacles, puggarees, and light drill clothes have all had to be adopted, as the thermometer has climbed relentlessly higher. Troops are authorized to do all their work in their shirt sleeves and shorts, and, though seemed curious at first to see even regiment-majors with collarless grey shirts wide open at the neck and their badges of rank taken off their arms and loosely tacked on to their waists, the effect on the whole is quite workmanlike. For the troops at the base there is great compensation this weather in sea-bathing.

The waters of this endless gulf, after receiving the refuse of scores of transports and warships for eight or nine months, make the Thames of London quite pellucid by comparison, but nevertheless the sea every afternoon has the pink fringe of bathing Tommies. Up-country men have in many places dug small plunge-baths alongside the fast-dwindling streams. For cleanliness the English soldier is insatiable and a standard marvel to the native people. Those personal ablutions often cease abruptly with the bath given them at the end of the day. Lucky are troops stationed near the fresh, cool waters.

"The lovely defendant says she shot in self-defense." "But she further avers that the man she killed had never raised his hand against her." "True, but something told her that he might do that any time."

PARAGON PROGRESS SEEMS VERY REAL

Advertisements in the local newspapers for the sale of the two wooden buildings on the Broadway Casino site show that the backers of the Paragon theatre project are making real progress. Notice was also served on Edward T. McGill, who uses one of the buildings for storage, and on the cigar factory that occupies the other, to vacate.

One of the type of seats which will be used in the Paragon is now on exhibition in the window of Gregory and Company, the Broadway furniture store, and is a comfortable appearing affair. It is attracting quite a bit of attention.

Vice President Sharp of the Paragon Theatres Corporation said this morning that affairs were progressing to his satisfaction. He added that considerable interest is being taken in the enterprise by Kingston people.

KINGSTON, N. Y., AUG. 10, 1916.

The appreciative crowds that have greeted Mr. Hughes in Detroit and Chicago show not only interest but reflect unmistakably the stirring of the popular demand for a change at Washington. The question as to whether the mere substitution of Hughes for Wilson that the President's champions would have us believe. It is rather the substitution of firmness for indecision, of true Americanism for a polyglot patriotism too proud to fight and too fearful of consequences to withdraw. In short, a change from an extravagant, inefficient conduct of public affairs to economical and impartial administration with rhetoric thrown into the discard in favor of real action, with definite and fixed objectives to supplant the present wavering irresolution. "One hundred per cent a candidate" is Mr. Hughes's appraisal of himself from the time he doffed the judicial robes to accept a nomination he did not seek. On the bench he was 100 per cent a judge and as President we believe the same high percentage will be maintained no matter how severe may be the tests of time.

It is a flash of the Hughes of a decade ago that is projected on the screen of those Middle Western meetings. The effectiveness with which the candidate pulled the tail feathers of Secretary of Commerce Redfield in the controversy over Democratic abuses in the Federal civil service is shown by the letter from former Census Director Durand who, Mr. Redfield declared, "retired voluntarily." Mr. Durand retired all right but only when told by the Secretary that "the administration wished to create a vacancy" in his office. There is no need for any worry that the Republican nominee cannot make good any charges of inefficiency and politics played at the expense of the government that he sees fit to make against President Wilson and the crew of incompetents with which the Federal ship is burdened. Mr. Hughes knows the man. The man who is facing and is most cheerful and smiling, as he has reason to be. Even from a high seat on the bench the petty politics that have featured official circles in Washington can be observed just as plainly as the breaks in our foreign policy can be seen by the country generally. We are destined to learn a lot about our capital, our President and his party within the next two months and, while it may not be pleasant reading, the reformative work thereby made necessary will make the portrayal a patriotic duty from which there must be no shrinking.

The arrest of twenty-one amusement men at Atlantic City and their threat to invoke laws which will close down every sort of amusement at that resort unless their prosecution ceases draws attention again to the conflict between regulatory laws and those who are to be regulated. The number of people who believe that regulatory laws should fill the statute books and be invoked only in case of popular demand, or to control excesses is probably balanced by the people who believe that laws should be strictly enforced and dead-letter laws should be repealed. In New York State it is possible to find a law to remedy almost any condition, but in spite of that new laws constantly are being adopted by town, city, county and State authorities. Many such laws are observed neither in letter nor spirit, but their provisions can be invoked when, in popular phraseology, conditions "get too raw." In the estimation of the advocates of keeping unenforced laws on the statute books the ends accomplished more than offset the disregard of law which advocates of the other system claim is encouraged by enforcing laws spasmodically. There are some laws which in every community are enforced only against the persistent offender and are not sought to be applied to the unintentional sporadic violator. Occasional arise, of course, where it becomes necessary to require a strict enforcement by imposing punishment against every violator in order to instill a proper respect for the law. Such occasions include the existing epidemic of infantile paralysis, or any other health law where the entire public easily may become affected vitally. Offenses against the individual which do not affect the entire public except as a violation of a law to which a majority of the people bow in acquiescence because it is law, afford greater opportunity for tempering justice with mercy and in such cases the particular circumstances of the offense may rightly be taken into consideration in mitigation. While there is a general demand that dead-letter laws shall be eliminated, it is difficult to determine where that process shall begin, but there can be no dispute that all laws should be made as simple, instead of as complex, as possible, and that greater justice results from allowing latitude to the discretionary powers of magistrates provided the magistrates possess the right mental calibre.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Rubberham—"Did your runabout cost much?" Wheeler—"Not so much as it has."—Judge.

"Telephones are great time-savers, aren't they?" "Well, that depends upon who calls you up."—Boston Transcript.

"Do you think the election will go your way?" "Can't say as to that," replied Senator Sorghum. "I'm going to do my best to go its way."—Washington Star.

"I suppose you miss your husband terribly." "No, I can't say that I do. I was a golf widow for years before he died, but it does seem strange not to have him 'phone that he is going to be late for dinner."—Detroit Free Press.

Mrs. Younghusband (climbing at mountain resort)—"It's very steep here, isn't it?" Husband (even then in the Adirondacks). "Mr. Younghusband—" "I don't know, my dear. We will be better able to judge after we see the hotel bill."—Judge.

Father—"Now, Harry, I want you to be good while I am at the office today." Harry—"I'll be good for a nickel." Father—"See here, young man, you are to remember that you cannot be a son of mine unless you are good for nothing."—Puck.

Laziness.

A New York man-milliner believes in American fashions for Americans. "It is only laziness," he said, "that makes us import our fashions. Why, when I think of our overwhelming laziness in this important matter, I am reminded of the tramp."

"Kiss me, a plate of meat and a hunk o' pie?" a tramp asked a farmer.

"Yes if you'll do some work," the farmer answered.

"What kind o' work?" said the tramp with a yawn.

"Diggin' potatoes," said the farmer.

"The tramp yawned again.

"You'd better cut the man not played 'em," he said. "He knows where they are."—The Washington Star.

Sounds Homelike.

First Councillor—"Here's a fine looking street."

Second—"You're right. What the best thing to do with it."

"Let's have it dug up for a sewer."

"But wouldn't it be proper to pave it first?"

"Of course, I thought you would understand that. Then, after it is paved and a drain put in, we'll have it repaved."

"All in readiness to be dug up again for the gas pipe? I see you understand the principles of municipal economy. After we have had it repaved for the second time, then what?"

"Well, then it will be ready for widening. There's nothing I admire so much as a system in the care and improvement of our roadways."—Fall Mall Gazette.

Hence Their Popularity.

Bishop Leonard was once being interviewed previous to his departure for a holiday in Europe.

"Maybe, bishop," said a facetious reporter, "you'll bring back a new religion with you. But be careful if you do—you know how hard it is to get things through the custom house."

"Oh," said Bishop Leonard, "there wouldn't be any difficulty about that. All these various new religions never have any duties attached to them."—Washington Star.

Condensed His Report.

William Roekhammer, P. R. R. station agent, tells the following story which should take a prominent place along with other stories concerning brevity. The story: Pat Garvey, section foreman at Trunkerville, was formerly in the habit of sending long and detailed reports to the supervisor. The supervisor became weary of wading through a mass of detail and ordered Garvey to "boil" his reports down. "You aren't writing love letters," was the supervisor's rebuke, "but railroad reports." Soon after this ultimatum was received by Garvey, the memorable cloudburst and flood occurred at Trunkerville. This is the laconic report that Garvey sent in: "The river is where the railroad was."—Tidiloute News.

49 YEARS WITHOUT LOSING A DAY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chicago, Aug. 10.—Forty-nine years without a working day off. That is the record of Joseph T. Bean, 4,623 Wabash avenue, who has just retired on a pension by the New York Central lines. For the greater part of that time, he had his hand on a throttle as a locomotive engineer and was retired because he had reached the age of 70.

It was on May 1, 1867, that he first went to work for the company, as a locomotive freeman on the Lake Shore and Michigan Central, in the suburban service. It was only a few years later he was promoted to the post of engineer, and during all those years, he ran locomotives of all types without ever having been in an accident.

"Good health, the result of clean habits, made me a good man physically," was his only explanation. "I never did any drinking, so my nerves were always in good shape, and I never needed a vacation. That's the reason I never took one. Safety first was my motto long before it became a slogan of the public, and it applied to my physical well-being as well as my work."

"You always hear a lot of talk about men who retire on a pension being anxious to get back in the lurch. Maybe it's because I never took a vacation, but I have no such desire. I'm just as glad to quit as I was to get a job nearly fifty years ago."

Mr. Bean has a wife and four children, all doing well, one of them being a well known attorney.

INVENT A ROOSTER SILENCER.

Georgia Genius Suppresses Nuisance by Lowering Range of Crows.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 10.—Atlanta roosters are going to stop crowing at night. The city council has investigated and has found that they can be made to stop, and accordingly has determined that owners of roosters must install the necessary apparatus. The latter consists of a six-inch board above the rooster's roost, of such a height that the rooster cannot raise himself to more than half his crowing reach. A rooster held down to half his height can make no more than a bob-tailed dog can walk a foot log, according to the testimony of rooster owners who have used the apparatus. Therefore council has decided to pass an ordinance making the use of the apparatus compulsory, and thereby enabling persons living in the neighborhood of chicken houses to sleep without disturbance.

A Dream Farmer Wakes Up.

He met a friend the other day and he was mad. He has been running a grocery store until this spring. Now he is running a farm. Life on the farm doesn't look as rosy to him as it once did. He is sun-blistered, chigger-bitten and discontented. He says he tried to sell enough milk to buy cow feed, and his hens insist on eating regularly and most of the time they forget to lay eggs. He believes he will get a job on the road.

This sort of disillusionment is common enough. All the towns and cities are full of dream farmers—back-to-the-landers—who feed themselves with vain imaginings. The farmer is the only independent man, they say. It does not cost him anything to live. Nothing at all. Every dollar he takes in is just so much clear velvet. Things just grow into money while he sleeps.

It is the rosiest of all dreams. Fortunately for them and the rest of us, most of the city dream farmers stay where they are. They never wake up, because they never move to the country and experience the stern reality.

The fact is, of course, that it takes a farmer to farm successfully. The barber and the bookkeeper and the ribbon clerk will do much better as a rule if they confine their agricultural work to the imagination. An inexperienced and uncultivated urbanite can come to the farm and be happy and prosperous. He has been known to do it. But it isn't the rule. Farming is a man's sized job, and the man who believes it to be a rosy dream is apt to have a sad awakening.—Farm Life.

STATE OFFICIALS ASKED ABOUT THE ELLENVILLE FAIR

Health Officer Johnson Puts the Matter Squarely up to Them—Laxity in Quarantine and Attempted Secrecy Have Brought Punishment.

No new cases of infantile paralysis or no suspected cases in Kingston had been reported to Dr. Frank A. Johnson, the health officer, up to noon today. The quarantine square is still busy, and doing efficient work.

Dr. Johnson informed a Freeman representative this morning that owing to a large number of inquiries regarding the Ellenville fair next week he had decided to take the matter up with the state board of health and see if the fair would be allowed to proceed considering the large number of paralysis cases in the town of Wawarsing. He said that he did not care about doing anything to interfere with the county fair, but owing to the fact that there was so much of the disease prevalent in that township, and that the fair would be attended by large numbers of Kingston people who would expose themselves to the disease, and on returning home would help to spread it, he had decided to ask the state what action it intended taking. The fact that Kingston is practically free from the disease, he said, was due to the precautions that had been taken which would prove of no avail if Kingston people were allowed to attend the county fair.

Why Disease Prevails.

Owing to the lack of proper support by the other officials and the residents and business interests of the town of Wawarsing the work of Dr. Rapp, the health officer of that township, has been seriously handicapped and quarantine regulations have proved of little avail because not enforced.

It is this condition of affairs in the town of Wawarsing and adjoining towns in Sullivan county that has caused the health authorities of the city of New York to issue the warning they did on Wednesday to people to stay away from the summer resorts in those towns, and to decide to issue no more health certificates or permits to New Yorkers who decided to go to the summer resorts in that region.

Indescribably Filthy.

The conditions found in some of the boarding houses in that vicinity were described by a nurse from the state department as filthy beyond belief.

The Contrast.

The conditions found in the town of Wawarsing and towns in Sullivan county, contrasted with conditions in the city of Kingston and some of the adjoining towns, notably the town of Esopus, where the work of an efficient health officer, properly supported by the other officials and the residents generally has retarded the disease to those who first brought it in, and prevented more cases coming in, shows conclusively the effectiveness of quarantine regulations such as were first adopted by Kingston's authorities, and that this is the only method known of preventing the spread of the disease.

State Board Objected.

When Kingston adopted the present stringent regulations, which have kept the city free of the disease, the action taken was frowned upon by the state board of health, and the city of New York, who could not see as far ahead as the local health board and Dr. Johnson, the health officer. In fact New Yorkers were shocked to learn that they would not be admitted to Kingston without being examined and placed under quarantine until it was learned that they were not afflicted with the disease.

Now Waking Up.

In the past day or so, however, the state authorities and the authorities of New York city are waking up and acknowledging the efficiency of quarantine regulations such as adopted here, and where they threatened dire things because Kingston was taking proper precautions to guard its residents, they are now tardily advocating the very things to which they raised objections.

STONE RIDGE.

Stone Ridge, Aug. 10.—On account of the quarantine regulations in the town of Marbletown, the entertainment which was to have been given in the Reformed Church on August 23, by Miss Mary E. Noone of Kingston, has been called off, but the sale of fancy articles will be held just the same and also refreshments will be for sale.

NEW YORK CITY OFFICIAL WAKES UP

Tries to Apply Quarantine That Was Denounced When It Was Most Effective—Exhibits Customary Lack of Knowledge of Geography.

A complete right-about-face on the part of the state of New York city health departments is a feature of the developments of the last 24 hours in the infantile paralysis situation. At the request of the Albany authorities, Health Commissioner Emerson on Wednesday issued a warning to the public against going to "the Catskill mountains," which statement shows the customary ignorance of geography and the facts in relation thereto which the public has come to associate with official opinions from the greater city.

In his fulminations, Commissioner Emerson proclaims conditions serious "in the Catskills." As a matter of fact, while there are a considerable number of cases of the disease in the extreme eastern Catskills there are very few cases reported from the central and western Catskills, and these few in practically every instance have been traced to New York, where lax medical regulations permitted active cases to go out and spread the disease all over the state. All such cases have either been sent back to New York or a rigid quarantine established. This applies to all resorts in the Catskills reached by way of Kingston.

In addition, at Mohonk and Minnewaska, where precautions have been taken, there are no cases of the disease, while in the remaining parts of the Shawangunk mountains and the foothills of the Catskills in Sullivan county and the towns of Wawarsing and Rochester, in Ulster county, New York city has been permitted to make a dumping ground of infection and the local quarantine has not been as effective as it should be due to the lack of support from the board of health and the open opposition of boarding house keepers and business men friendly to them who fear that strict quarantine and publicity will injure trade.

For the benefit of opposition of this character, Kingston's experience with the smallpox outbreak of some few years ago has been cited. A similar lax policy being permitted through opposition of business men to publicity until finally the situation grew to be so bad that nothing but the most drastic measures could be used, although at the outset a strict quarantine and preventive publicity would have saved the city the resultant damage and odium.

In finally establishing this quarantine on right lines, the then newly elected health officer, Dr. L. K. Stelle, cleaned up the situation in short order and by means of the newspapers and enforcement of health regulations performed a service of permanent value to the community. Since that time the cry that efficient sanitation "hurts business" has ceased to cut any figure in Kingston. Kingston business men had their lesson and learned that tales conducted by the Duke Street Line's Union did far more harm when unchecked by published facts.

Somewhat similar conditions have prevailed in New York where children in contact with active cases of poliomyelitis have been brought away from the city with little difficulty and have carried the disease to remote sections where it has spread only where effective precautions were taken at the outset as in Kingston. The deputy state commissioner of health was at this time advising cities against quarantine in public talks to health officers, the effect of which on the lay mind may be better imagined than described.

Federal surgeons now in New York have declared that only a rigid quarantine or medical supervision of all children who are traveling can check the plague.

Commissioner Emerson's latest bulletin was issued following the decision of the New York Board of Education to postpone the opening of the public schools from September 11 to October 2d. The statement from the New York Times this morning reads:

At the request of the state department of health, Dr. Emerson yesterday issued and emphasized a warning to the public against going to the Catskill mountains.

Conditions in the Mountains.

"I have been advised," said Commissioner Emerson "that conditions in Sullivan and Ulster counties, especially in Fallsburg, Liberty, Hurleyville and Ellenville, are so serious that the state department of health considers it a serious danger for more people to go into those regions. The federal health officers will be requested to warn against going into the regions where persons who would do so by the West Shore and New York, Ontario & Western Railroads, which run through New Jersey.

"The local supervisors of Ulster county have been requested by the state department to provide a temporary isolation hospital for those cases already in the county, so that the spread of the disease among the crowds filling the hotels and boarding houses may be checked.

My information is that conditions in many places in the Catskills are deplorable. When the epidemic began in New York thousands of frightened persons rushed to the mountain resorts with their children and they soon filled to overflowing all of the available accommodations. Of course, many of them took poliomyelitis with them and the disease soon broke out among the children. Conditions were splendid for its spread, and now the danger there is great. Certainly no one else should increase this danger to himself and others by going into the affected regions.

"And I wish to warn the New York people in the Catskills that they must not send their sick children to the city. In some cases children have been shipped to the city in a dying condition, and not only have their deaths been hastened by this transportation, but the danger to the traveling public and to the community has been increased. These sick children have been brought in

FIRE HYDRANTS TO BE INSTALLED

Better Fire Protection For Business Sections—Six Steamer Hydrants Will Be Placed Under Direction of Fire Chief.

In order to afford better facilities for fighting fire breaking out in the uptown and downtown business sections of the city the water board has instructed Superintendent Harrison to install six steamer hydrants. The hydrants have been ordered, and as soon as received will be installed by Superintendent Harrison who will co-operate with Chief Chipp in selecting the best locations for placing these hydrants. These hydrants will make it possible to use the new automobile fire truck to better advantage in the business sections which is the reason for their installation. Superintendent Harrison said this morning that steamer hydrants have been installed on the high points in the city and that now ample water pressure and fire protection was afforded in those localities.

DAYLIGHT BURGLARS ROB MICHAUX HOUSE

Thought to Be the Same Men Who Robbed the Van Vliet Home on Henry Street—Search Made in Newburgh for Robbers.

Search was made in Newburgh on Wednesday by Sheriff Shultz for two men who on Tuesday robbed the Michaux road house on the Saugerties road. It was thought that the two men were from Newburgh since they were known to have made inquiries for a Newburgh woman, and also known to have made inquiries regarding trains stopping in Newburgh.

Monday afternoon, as told in The Freeman at the time, burglars broke into the residence of Mrs. E. Van Vliet on Henry street, where they stole $3 in money and some canned fruit. After robbing the house they ransacked it, tearing mattresses from the beds and opening bureau drawers in search of valuables. They secured entrance through the cellar. No one was at home at the time and they were in no hurry for having robbed the house they cooked themselves a square meal.

Later they left the house and the robbery was not discovered until the arrival home that evening of Miss Mary Van Vliet, who reported it to the police.

The next morning—Tuesday—the Michaux house was broken into. The same means of entry were used as at the Henry street house, the cellar door being forced. Within the house they broke open an automatic piano, from which they took $15 in nickels. They also took a quantity of cigars, some whiskey, a hand sachel and other small articles, as well as a loaded .38 calibre revolver. No one was at home at the Michaux house at the time it was robbed. The robbery was discovered Tuesday evening and reported to the police, who traced the men to Newburgh.

It was also learned that about 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the same pair had been seen in the Kingston yard of the West Shore railroad and had there jumped a southbound train.

"Well, I see there are a number of new state laws to go into force the first of the month," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"That's the trouble," replied the politician. "They are not enforcing the laws we have now on the books, and yet they keep adding to the laws ever so often. What are the new laws about?"

"Why one of the new state laws going into effect the first of the month is one that makes it a misdemeanor for any one engaged in operating a railroad to employ in or about the operation of an engine, train or trains, any engineer or other employee who is unable to read the time tables of such railroad, and to speak and understand the English language," replied the friend.

"Hub," said the politician, "after puzzling over some time tables I have reached the conclusion that the only way to read a time table is to ask the ticket agent when the next train leaves."

"Then I see that another law provides that no person shall become engaged in the business of plumbing unless he has procured from the plumbing board of the city a metal plate or sign marked with the words 'master plumber,' which he has to display in his show window," said the friend.

"I suppose the reason for that," replied the politician, "is because if one is looking for a plumber, and should not see the sign he would not enter the shop, being under the impression that it might be a millinery store."

"Another law prohibits the selling, carrying or use of firearms silencers," said the friend after a slight pause.

"Judging from the police cases the past few months, a knife seems to be the favorite weapon with local talent," was the reply of the politician. He continued, "and there is no doubt about that being silent enough."

Embarrassing moments—inviting "the girl" into a confectionery store to partake of an ice cream soda and learning from the clerk that the price has been jumped to ten cents a glass, and you only have ten cents in your pocket.

DOES KINGSTON WANT AN AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY?

Kingston is within 80 miles of a market for half a million automobiles, the richest undeveloped mart in the United States, and with excellent railroad and steamboat shipping facilities.

In New York City you will find the biggest and the richest undeveloped automobile market in the United States. When we say undeveloped we mean exactly that.

Of course there are thousands of automobiles in New York. A Spring afternoon on Fifth Avenue looks like a traveling exhibition of all the cars in the world. But when you get down to figures and comparisons, it doesn't take long to prove that really BIG AUTOMOBILE SELLING in NEW YORK CITY is just getting tuned up and ready to start.

Do you know that ONE-FIFTH of all the people in the UNITED STATES with incomes of $3,000 and more live in NEW YORK CITY and its adjacent suburbs?

Do you know that this community adds 213,000 people—a city the size of Denver—to its population EVERY YEAR?

AND THAT in 1915 NEW dwellings—apartment houses and flats—providing homes for 263,530 people were built? And that new home building in that year cost the huge sum of $122,794,800?

And that ONE-FOURTH OF ALL the savings bank deposits in the country are in NEW YORK CITY?

And that the actual value of GREATER NEW YORK'S real estate—ground and buildings—exceeds the combined real estate values of Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland, Buffalo and Detroit?

The metropolitan district of NEW YORK contains more people paying taxes on $3,000 to $10,000 incomes than the nine States of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas and Kentucky.

But in these nine States there were 653,000 registered automobiles in February, 1915, while the number of cars in the metropolitan district falls short of 125,000.

That's what we mean when we use the word UNDEVELOPED, and it's a word that fits the case.

(Taken from Detroit News, May 31, 1916.)

Kingston's opportunity is here right now. Will the opportunity be embraced or will the automobile building company that wants to locate here be forced to locate in Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, or some other point on the Hudson River?

CONGRESSMEN IN A BASEBALL GAME

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Democratic and Republican members of congress lined up in a fierce baseball encounter on the diamond this afternoon for charity's sake. The big battle for the benefit of the city's indigent, was staged at American League Park before a large and fashionable throng. The contest took on the aspect of a burlesque of the great national pastime, and a laugh every minute was provided the rovers, the lawmakers cavorting about the field like so many kids.

Jenerson's Manual was adhered to throughout the game, with unlimited debate permitted on doubtful decisions. A special rule was brought in at the outset to allow batters to walk around the bases instead of running.

Congressman Gallivan, the famous Massachusetts spiball artist, and for many years a Harvard star of the first rank, tossed the slab for the Democratic contingent, and incidentally played most of the game for his team. Stump of Virginia did the box honors for the Republicans. Tom Miller, a New Jersey recruit, scored brilliantly for the Republicans at first base.

Players who performed, including both regulars and substitutes, were: Democrats—Webb, of North Carolina; Rouse, Kentucky; Oldfield, Arkansas; Nicholls, South Carolina; Gallivan, Massachusetts; Kinchloe, Kentucky; Stout, Montana; Van Dyke, Minnesota; Rauch, Indiana; Carter, Oklahoma; Anale, South Carolina; Scully, New Jersey; Sears, Florida; Caldwell, New York; and Dill, Washington.

Republicans—Hamilton, New York; Farr, Pennsylvania; Norion, North Dakota; Anderson, Minnesota; Stump, Virginia; Johnson, South Dakota; Mudd, Maryland; Bacharach, New Jersey; Conner, West Virginia; Chipperfield, Illinois; Gray, New York; and Denison, Illinois.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, Aug. 10.—Mr. and Mrs. Riley of New York are on a visit with Mrs. Riley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Patridge, and other relatives of this place.

Capt. R. H. Decker will attend the races this Saturday at Washington.

Dr. Becker, as health officer, is kept very busy at present. They all have to watch out for outsiders, who are coming from other places.

Miss Susie Lent is out of town for vacation.

Mrs. J. S. Mack has a good many city guests.

The turn of weather of last week made everyone feel just like staying home, still last Friday was Auxiliary Club day and while the heat was fearful outdoors, the M. E. Church parlor was a fine cool place and over 30 members were present when the gavel fell, which declared business was the all important topic. One new member was admitted. The routine work was attended to, fine reports of progress and added interest given from committees. At present under the epidemic of infantile paralysis, no public gatherings will be held, therefore no arrangements for any entertainments have been given.

The ladies had a grand meeting, so your reporter was informed. After all business was transacted, then they just enjoyed visiting and everyone seemed bent on having a good time and from what we hear, they must have had. The hostesses, Mrs. J. C. Bodrick, Mrs. Howard Wilcox, Mrs. Hendricks, Miss Belle Brinkerhoff, Mrs. Harry Dobbs and Miss Bertha Dimsey, served several varieties of cake and ice cold fruit punch. This was delicious on a warm day and was enjoyed greatly. This club expects to send a barrel of canned fruit to the Deaconess Home this year as last. The members expressed their pleasure to these people, who so hospitably entertained, and declared a very pleasant afternoon had been spent.

Every one in this place was completely upset when the news came that little Elizabeth Coddington, over 8 years of age, was suddenly and severely ill on Sunday evening. A doctor was summoned and it was very soon found that she had an acute attack of infantile paralysis and she passed away Tuesday morning about 4 o'clock. There was a trained nurse in attendance, and everything done that medical aid could do, but of no avail. She was the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Coddington; he is pastor of the M. E. Church here. This girl was a beautiful and attractive one, very bright, lovely disposition and loved by every one. The Rev. Mr. Coddington, her father, had been to Northfield, Mass., to attend a conference there and was not at home, but arrived after her death, which seems doubly hard. The prayer and short service was held on Tuesday afternoon from the home. Several gathered on the lawn to show their sympathy to this bereaved family. The Rev. Mr. Bray officiating. The internment was at Middletown, where the body was taken. F. L. Meadell accompanied it to its final resting place. It is a very sad affair. The father, mother, two daughters and one son are left to mourn the loss of this dear child and the entire community extends to them their heartfelt sympathies in their hours of deep bereavement.

J. C. Lee of New York city returned there after spending over a week on Maple avenue, his summer home, with his family.

Tuesday evening the weather man was very kind to us, poor mortals, who had suffered greatly the very great heat. The heat wave seemed to hang over our place, but the shower of evening brought to all, appreciable relief and Wednesday everybody seemed delighted to have the change, and the fine breeze, and it is hoped it will last for a short time to give people a chance to get some strength and ambition.

NO DANGER SEEN BY MAJOR MORANT

Famous German Military Critic, However, Admits Allies' Successes Are Serious—Claims That Initiative Still Remains With Kaiser's Forces.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Berlin, Aug. 10.—The Berlin "Tageblatt" publishes a long review of the latest developments of the war by Major Ernst Morant, the most famous German military critic. He sees no danger for the Central Powers in the present situation, although he concedes that the efforts of the Allies are more serious than ever before.

In part he says:
"Our enemies are jubilant over their joint offensive. For the first time, after many failures, they have succeeded in reaching a certain unity of action, but it is an open question whether the British did not start their attempts at an advance too early and the Russians too late. This question can only be answered definitely when we learn to what extent the grouping of the German forces has been influenced by the strategy of the Allies."
"French and English military critics are astonished by the fact that so far very few transfers of German troops have taken place. Indirectly they admit that the initiative still remains on our side in spite of the offensive movements started against our lines on all fronts. We are attacking before Verdun as we did before, and on the rest of the western front our defense has increased in strength since the Allies struck their blow in Picardy. Strategically it matters very little if a few dents are knocked into our long line here and there."

"In the east our defense also is as powerful as ever. The Russian offensive has not changed the strategic situation and it will, in my estimation, not succeed, because it is aimless."
"We are told in dispatches from Petrograd that Lemberg is to be re-conquered to re-establish the prestige of the Russian armies, but the events of the last two months show plainly the general staff of the Czar had no definite plan when the General Brusilov and Kuropatkin received orders to strike. The military expert of Budapest, "Lloyd," sized up the Russian operations properly when he remarked last week:
"The colossal mechanization starts to move, but the Russian general staff does not know which direction it will take. That is left to fate. If the steam roller seems to advance in the direction of Kovel the Russian strategists announce that they intend to capture this important railroad centre, but as soon as they find their way barred they decide that Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, really is the object of their efforts."

"There is no doubt that the Russian offensive was principally undertaken to bring relief to the French and Italians and to influence Roumania. The hope of the Allies to bring the Roumanian army to their side will again be disappointed, however, because the comparatively un-

Also Chapter 15, the last of the thrilling serial mystery drama.
"The Mysteries of Myra."

Important successes of General Brusilov have made but little impression on the government in Bucharest.
"The Italians have at least temporarily been saved by the Russian offensive against the Austro-Hungarian front in Eastern Galicia and the Bukovina. The Austrians were compelled to withdraw troops from the Italian front, to give up their victorious advance between the Adige and the Brenta and to fall back against their own frontier, but Count Cadorna knows very well that the sledge hammer blows against his forces will be renewed as soon as the Russian offensive stops."

"The big push" of the English and French on the western front has not proved the success our enemies expected it to be. Although the battles on both sides of the Somme continue there is now but little danger than the Allies will break through our front. We hold the numerically superior forces of the enemy and give them a chance to bleed themselves to death in vain attacks.

"The small gains made by the British and French troops have been very costly and we may well doubt whether the Allies are willing to continue their terrible sacrifices indefinitely."

"The French have done the lion's share of the work in Picardy. They attacked with the greatest bravery, as they did in the Champagne a year ago, but the small strip of territory won by them is nowhere more than 4 1/4 miles wide and they did not succeed in reaching Peronne."

"In their daily official reports they have far more to say about the German counter blows than about their own attacks. They are already showing signs of exhaustion and looking anxiously toward their British allies, who have been plainly told by the 'Echo de Paris' and other French papers that 'they will have to get a move on,' to use a slang expression."

"Many of the French papers, with the consent of the censor, angrily comment on the fact that the British are lagging behind and have accomplished but little along their section of the battle front between the Aisne and the Somme. To refute this reproach the English mysteriously hint that their main blow would be struck at another point. This may be true, but we await further developments calmly. The result of the battles fought since the first of July has convinced us that the numerically enormous British army is not able to drive us back to the Rhine."

"In the meantime our offensive against Verdun continues unimpaired. We are well able to beat back all the desperate counter attacks of the French before the fortress and to advance nearer our goal step by step."

"The neutral press discusses the possible consequences of the fall of Verdun. We cannot join this debate, but we know that the German general staff, trained in the spirit of Moltke, does not make large sacrifices to gain a temporary success of doubtful value, but always looks far ahead."

"The Russian offensive proves more durable than anybody expected. After a pause on the southeastern front it has started anew and at the same time General Kuropatkin began tremendous attacks against the lines of Field Marshal von Hindenburg and Prince Leopold of Bavaria in the north. Bitter battles were fought between Riga and Dvinsk along the Sitchara, on both sides of the Baranovitch railroad and along the Oginski canal, but everywhere our troops victoriously repelled the onslaughts of the enemy."

"Further south, in Volynia, General von Linsingen has been compelled to fall back across the Stokhod river, west of the Lutsk the Russians have crossed the Galician border at Brody, the army of General von Brothmer had to retire from the Strypa to the Kropotke, the Russians have advanced a little west of Kolemza and south of the Pruth the Austro-Hungarian front has been pushed back to the Carpathians."

"These successes of the Russians are of little practical value, because our front has nowhere been broken. In the Bukovina General von Pfannen-Baltin faced Russian forces which were numerically six times stronger than his. For a time his army was in a dangerous position and threatened with annihilation, but he skillfully withdrew toward the Carpathians, inflicting heavy losses upon the Russians in rear-guard actions. His lines remained intact and he was able to start a counter attack as soon as he received reinforcements."

"How long the Russians will be able to continue their offensive cannot be estimated. Grand Duke Nicholas again dominates the Russian general staff and has given orders that the Austro-German lines must be broken regardless of the cost. The present Russian strategic methods are exactly the same as during the first year of the war. The Russian borders will continue their onslaughts until exhaustion stops them. They may reach the wall of the Carpathians, but there they will surely dash themselves to pieces."

Sent on Their Way.

Rudolph Miller and Halmon Finkelshten, two Hebrews, were arrested on Wednesday by Sergeant Murray as suspicious characters. It was said that the two men were attracting the attention of residents downtown by offering chickens for sale to be delivered the next day. This morning they were arraigned before Recorder Lang. Local Hebrews who had learned of the arrest of the men appeared in court and pleaded for clemency for the two men. The court informed them that he would sentence the two men to the pen at Albany for three months but would suspend sentence provided the men's carfare to Albany was paid over to the police, who would purchase the tickets and see the men aboard the train. This was done, and the two men, who wanted to go to Albany, were sent on their way.

And Sweeney Snored.

While passing through Prince street on Wednesday afternoon, Sergeant Hanley found John J. Sweeney, 28 years old, asleep in the gutter. Sweeney refused to awaken and had to be lifted up and placed in the wagon and on his way to the county jail snored unconsciously. Still asleep he was placed in a cell and this morning he was sober when removed from the jail and brought before Recorder Lang, who sentenced him to 30 days in the county jail. Sweeney lately has been a frequent visitor at the county hotel.

TEXAS MANEUVERS A GALA OCCASION

San Antonio Parade Attracts the Public in Numbers—What English Officer Thinks of American Recruiting Methods—Love of Military Inborn?

By Telegram to The Freeman.
San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 10.—With band playing and colors flying, regimental drill takes place on the broad parade ground of picturesque Fort Sam Houston five evenings of every week. The Nineteenth and Thirty-Seventh Infantry, regulars, and the Illinois and Wisconsin state troops, engage in maneuvers. The public is invited and the public comes. Society is out in automobiles. Street cars bring their quota and many come on foot.

The idea is that of Major General Frederick Funston. He thinks a little public show will stimulate the men, arouse their interest, awaken interest in the army and aid recruiting. General Funston has refused to comment on this point but by coincidence his order for "regimental drill" came on the heels of the publication in the Army and Navy Journal of an article by A. C. O. Egerton, a British army officer, saying there is not enough show and glitter about the American army.

Egerton's criticism follows:
"As a British officer in this country, buying horses and what not, I cannot but be a bit impressed by and very much in sympathy with the 'preparedness' movements now become such an issue here."
"From time to time one reads in the press of the difficulty your army is having in obtaining recruits to meet the recently authorized increase in the service."

"May I humbly suggest that this may be due, partially, to the fact that your army appears—from an English point of view—to be utterly lacking in those elements of the picturesque and in those qualities which appeal to the imaginations of thousands of men who are instinctively soldiers, but who needs some stimulus to bring out their martial inclinations? By this I mean that in America you have no brilliant uniforms; your soldiers on liberty are attired in clothes which do not fit them, and in which, if they did, fit no man could possibly feel smart and dapper. The men do not walk well and are not military in appearance—doubtless through ignorance—and in conversation with several of them I learned—what to me as an Englishman—a most amazing thing—that most of your men prefer to appear in public in mufti rather than in uniform."

"Your regimental bands never play in your parks, and except on special holidays one never sees any of your officers in uniform cantering round Central Park, dining at the restaurant not attending the theater. To refrigerating plant of the Farmers' borrow one of your excellent expressions, your army never 'shows off,' nor parades before the people."

"And what is the obvious result?"
"Americans are densely ignorant of their army. Most of them have never seen an American soldier and cannot tell you the most elementary facts concerning the service. The idea of the army's existence seems to an outsider, hardly to occur to the great majority of the population. It was not my good fortune to come to the United States before this year, and I had not up to then studied your service any more than I had that of, let us say, the Argentine, but I can assure you that I knew more about the American army than does the average New Yorker of means and education whom it has been my pleasure to meet."

"Friends here tell me that uniforms, bands, parades, etc., do not appeal to Americans and that the more frequent appearance of the army in public would not attract recruits. I cannot agree with them."
"From the standpoint of heredity your people, whether Anglo-Saxon, Germans or French, etc., come from races with an inborn love of the military. Surely this has not been totally lost during the development of the country. Again, from a practical point of view, I myself have seen Americans shout and stamp when a band—unusually made up of offensive foreigners—passes through a street at the head of some civic delegation and playing any tune with a swing to it. Also many of your militia regiments design for themselves most gaudy full dress uniforms for use, it would seem, only in the privacy of their armories. Why never in public? Are they self-conscious or ashamed?"

I., says "Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fisher of Sydney, Australia, who reached here this week for a several days' stay at the Shelburne, came across the continent from San Francisco by automobile and report a delightful trip, with good roads most of the long journey. A stop of several days was made at the Grand Canyon of Arizona. After reaching New York state Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, who were accompanied by their daughter, Virginia, were stopped continually on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic, and in Schenectady, Kingston, Newburgh and other places were not allowed to remain even to get food. They will return to Australia in September, going back to San Francisco by automobile."

This is a sample of the lies being printed. These people would have been permitted to eat in Kingston and probably in the other places named, under proper restrictions.

Railroads Must Speed Up.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Aug. 10.—The interstate commerce commission today issued a warning to all railroads and large shipping companies that unless they speed up their shipments there soon will be another serious car shortage. A shortage of cars at this time, the commission stated, would mean a serious loss to the grain growers of the middle west, who would be unable to get their product to the Atlantic seaboard for export.

Boyd Arrested Baisley.

Robert Baisley of No. 8 Post street was arrested Wednesday afternoon by Policeman John G. Boyd on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Baisley was paroled until this evening, when he will be arraigned for trial before Recorder Lang. According to Policeman Boyd's report, Baisley was drunk at his home and cursing and swearing in a loud tone, disturbing the neighborhood.

Was He Drowned?

Relatives of Howard Ives of New York have asked the police of Newburgh to investigate their belief that the young man drowned from the deck of the Central-nudson steamer William F. Rorer on the night of August 2. Ives was 22 years old. With a friend Ives slept on the deck and when the former awakened Ives was missing.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION ENDORSES CANDIDATES

Ringling Speeches and Resolutions Endorsing Candidates on National Ticket and Governor Whitman, Congressman Ward and Senator Walton.

The Republican county convention met at the court house at noon today and with great enthusiasm endorsed the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes for president, Charles S. Whitman for governor, Supreme Court Justice Wesley O. Howard of Troy to succeed himself and the Hon. Charles E. Nichols of Jefferson, Schenectady county, to fill the justiceship created in the Third district by the last legislature, and Charles W. Walton for senator.

Adjournment was then taken for dinner and selection of candidates for county office to be recommended to the voters for election in the primary election was taken up at this time.

Chairman Elting Creates Enthusiasm. County Chairman Philip Elting called the convention to order and presided during its deliberations. In calling the delegates to order, Chairman Elting started the enthusiasm which continued throughout the session.

Mr. Elting said in part:

"The Republican party is to be congratulated on such a representative gathering of men as are here today. This convention is really the main-spring of county government, and I believe that all thinking citizens can take pride in county affairs as they have originated and have been promulgated in these county conventions for many years by representatives of all sections of the county.

"During all my active experience in connection with the administration of Republican affairs in Ulster county, the prospect has never looked brighter for overwhelming victory."

"Our candidate for president, Governor Hughes, (prolonged applause), it will know to the people of this county because of his past associations among us and from close relations with him during the two terms he efficiently served as governor of this state, and I believe that the majority will receive in Ulster county that which has ever been given by the county to any other presidential candidate. (Applause.)

"We can also take pride in the Republican state administration. I believe, as do the people of this county, that the state should pay as it goes, a fair county and city tax, and this policy has been inaugurated under the administration of Governor Whitman. (Applause.)

"In local affairs, we have important offices to fill, and I trust that after careful consideration you will make wise selections and then unite and elect one of you go back to your districts and encourage the best candidates selected here today, work unceasingly for their election." (Prolonged applause.)

Judge Howard and Mr. Nichols Endorsed.

Joseph H. Vandervlyn of New Paltz was recognized by the chair and spoke enthusiastically of the candidacy of Justice Wesley O. Howard of Troy for justice of the supreme court, which was heartily endorsed, and the Hon. Charles E. Nichols of Schoharie, whose candidacy to fill the justiceship created by the last legislature, was also endorsed, both Judge Howard and Mr. Nichols being recommended to the judicial committee, which meets in Albany on Friday.

Mr. Vandervlyn said in part:

"At this time, as you gentlemen know, two justices of the supreme court are to be recommended to the voters of the Third judicial district. This is an honor which lawyers at least consider is the highest honor they can attain, and for that reason I speak feelingly.

"Wesley O. Howard of Troy is a man whom you all know. All the lawyers know him and most of the laymen. He is a man who for fourteen years has filled the position of justice of the supreme court with the highest honor and to the satisfaction of everyone, irrespective of their political affiliations.

"Judge Howard is a Democratic man—I did not say Democrat, because he is a Republican. But he is a Democratic man—the most approachable man you can imagine, a man anyone can talk to and a man to whom young lawyers especially, and here I speak from experience, can safely and confidently go for advice. He is not a man surrounded by lackeys who hold you at a distance, but he is a man whom it is always easy to see, a man who likes to meet and be met, and it is pre-eminently fitting that this convention should recommend him for re-election.

"The last legislature created another justiceship in this district and for this position I speak in behalf of the candidacy of Charles E. Nichols of Jefferson, Schenectady county. Schenectady has no judge, but situated as it is, with other judges quite a distance away, it is in need of a judge, and under present conditions it is hard on the people who have law business and on the lawyers themselves to reach a judge in another county whenever they have any business to transact. It has been conceded Schenectady should have a representative on the bench. I can say practically the same thing for Judge Howard. I have known him ever since it was my good fortune to meet him at the time he made the selection in nomination for congress my fellow townsman, the Hon. Frank J. LeFever. Like Judge Howard, Mr. Nichols is not a man above men, but he is a man to meet, a man who in every way has proved himself honest, straightforward and well qualified for this position." (Applause.)

Mr. Vandervlyn's motion that the convention recommend Judge Howard and Mr. Nichols to the judicial district committee was enthusiastically adopted.

Whitman Administration Endorsed.

Resolutions endorsing the administration of Governor Whitman were read by Cleon B. Murray of Ellenville. The name of the governor received applause at every mention and prolonged applause followed the reading. The resolution, which was adopted, was as follows:

"Whereas, while recognizing the preponderant importance of the national campaign impending, and the tremendous effect its issue will have upon the future of our republic among the nations of the world, and upon the value and inviolability of American citizenship in all places and at all times, yet as a gathering of citizens of the great Empire commonwealth, we cannot ignore the importance of this campaign so far as it involves the welfare of our state. Four years of awful nightmare of Democratic state administration, with its ever recurring disgrace and scandal, culminating in the impeachment and removal of a Democratic governor for alleged corruption, a proceeding in which accuser and accused lurled at each other nauseating charges of dishonesty and perjury, all of which were true, have been succeeded by two years of sane, calm, practical government, in our state, legislative, state officers and governor have combined in giving the people of the state such a government as has merited, and must merit continued approval. Free from cheap oratory and device or sham appeal, with no scandal or maladministration to mar its record, the administration of Governor Whitman and his fellow Republican state officials commands our respect and admiration, and therefore be it

"Resolved, that this convention of the Republican electors of the county of Ulster enthusiastically approve and endorse their work and recommendation to the citizenship of Ulster county a continuance in power of Governor Charles S. Whitman, and the Republican administration of the state which has restored to the people of the commonwealth sane and admirable government."

Congressman Ward's Record.

Congressman Charles B. Ward's record was endorsed in a speech by George F. Kaufman of Saugerties, who said in part:

"It is my privilege to recommend the name of a candidate for congress with whom I have had but little personal acquaintance, but I am proud to say that I am acquainted with Congressman Charles B. Ward's record of accomplishment. (Applause.) He is judged not by what he has said but by what he has done. (Applause.)

"In other words, Mr. Ward is not the kind of a congressman who stands around all day in talking, but who spends every hour in working for his constituents. He has not spent much time in following a 'waterfall waiting' policy, and his acquaintance with the art of oratory may be slight, but in accomplishing things for his district his record is unequalled, and I therefore have pleasure in moving that he be recommended to the voters for election." (Applause.)

The motion was adopted, and Mr. Ward was brought before the convention by Mr. Kaufman and Mr. Reynolds of Woodstock.

Mr. Ward's Speech.

Congressman Ward received an enthusiastic ovation when he appeared, and in responding, he said:

Congressman Ward said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I want to tell you that my appreciation is sincere and genuine for the action you have taken here today in recommending me to the Republicans of Ulster county for re-nomination. As the representative of the people of this congressional district I have endeavored at all times to do my duty as I have seen it and I can certainly assure you that your confidence serves to encourage me in coming before the enrolled Republicans on primary day, and if I am nominated I will continue to be an inspiration through the campaign. But a possible defeat could not in any measure diminish the high value in which I estimate your support.

After having served a term in congress as a member of the minority I look forward with enthusiasm and pleasure to further service as one of the majority under the leadership of Charles Evans Hughes.

If ever our country needed the firm guidance of the Republican party it is now. Since the days of Abraham Lincoln, the first Republican president, there has been no time so crucial and so important to the future destiny of our nation than the present time. The Republican party while in power has guided our country through peace and through war, never betraying a trust nor flinching in its duty. With Republicanism our people at home prospered under the economic principles of the Republican party; they were contented in the security of wise and efficient government, and the dignity and prestige of America were respected before all the world. In the light of the present Democratic administration, with its practice of the theory of free trade, with its inefficiency and extravagance, and with its weak vacillating foreign policy, it is my firm conviction that on November 7th next, the voters of the country will welcome the opportunity to again place their confidence and their hope in the party of Lincoln.

The eyes of every dominion on earth will be focussed on America, next election day. If I am not mistaken the world will learn that the great American people will stand behind their president so long as he is their president, but when opportunity affords they will retire a man who is "Too Proud to Fight" and put in his place a man who will uphold and maintain our national honor and safety—a man true to the peace-loving ideals of his country but a man who when he speaks, the world will know, he means what he says, a man whose words have been proven to be a guarantee of facts, and that man is the Republican candidate for president, Charles E. Hughes.

The European war has very largely served the purposes of a protective tariff, but under the first ten months' operation of the Democratic tariff law, before the war started, the figures of the Department of Commerce very plainly show that this Democratic tariff was inadequate either for the protection of American industries or to provide the government with the necessary revenue to meet its running expenses.

When the free trader determines to remove the bar between domestic and foreign labor he starts upon a policy of leveling American conditions down to the very lowest in the world. The American standard of living is the highest in the world and we should strive to maintain it as such. But we cannot hope to maintain it if we follow the Democratic theory of free trade and make our own industries and working men compete with the cheap labor of Europe and Asia.

When the European war ends, the belligerent nations staggering under an appalling war debt will seek in every conceivable way to make up their losses. They will welcome an open door in American markets to sell their productions in competition to our own. We cannot afford to lose sight of the importance of our own economic future and a protective tariff will continue to be our greatest safeguard.

As great as has been the service of the Republican party in the past the opportunity for even greater service is apparent. And gentlemen, you will find me in the coming campaign working side by side with the other candidates of the Republican party or working shoulder to shoulder with the regulars in the ranks. In either event I will be working enthusiastically and earnestly for the success of the entire Republican ticket.

Congressman Ward was applauded vigorously many times during his speech and again at its conclusion.

What Walton Has Done.

Joseph M. Fowler, by courtesy of the First Ward delegates, was recognized and spoke of Senator Walton's record of accomplishment. He said in part:

"You know of course whom I should suggest for recommendation to the voters for Senator. Only one course is open. Two years ago we nominated and elected Charles W. Walton of this city. (Applause.)

"He had been known to us for a number of years as a young man who had practiced successfully at the bar. He had had no legislative experience but his personal popularity and strength was shown by the fact that he carried Ulster county by four thousand and Greene county by a thousand—a majority of over five thousand in the district, which broke all records.

"With no actual experience in the legislature, but with ability and affability he made friends everywhere in the district during his campaign, and in Albany when he went there to take up his duties. He was assigned to good committees and by close application to his work he made good, and I challenge anyone to point to one vote for which he should apologize. (Applause.) His vote has always been cast on the side of what he believed to be right, and it was right."

The duties of a senator have become more than those of merely a lawmaker. With the State Highway Department, the Board of Health, the Public Service Commission and the various other commissions and departments which have been instituted to bring the state government closer to the people, the services of a state senator have somewhat changed, and he is more valuable to his constituents.

"I know personally that during the entire session Senator Walton went to Albany every Monday and remained there until the end of the week. He was always on the job. There have been senators who have devoted more attention to personal than to public affairs, but that is not so in his case.

"Sometimes nominations are given as a favor to those who are nominated, but this time the reverse is true. We should not only renominate but also re-elect Senator Walton." (Applause.)

Mr. Fowler's motion to recommend Senator Walton for re-nomination was adopted, after being seconded by Theodore B. Cornwell of Saugerties.

Senator Walton's Speech.

Senator Walton was escorted before the convention by Mr. Fowler and Mr. Mullen of Gardiner, and received a hearty ovation.

He said in part:

"I want to assure you at the outset that I fully appreciate the high honor you have conferred on me and fully appreciate the responsibilities it incurs.

"Never has there been a time in the history of the state when the Republican party went before the people asking for support with a cleaner, better record. Two years ago we said to the people, 'We will do this, and we did it. We said 'We will abolish the board of claims and other useless departments,' and we did it. (Applause.)

"The Republican party has placed the business of the state on a business basis, so that today it is run on honor, from one end to the other, and you and I have a right to feel proud that we are members of that great party which has proved itself not a party of promises merely but a party of fulfillment. (Applause.)

"Every law which makes for human equality and human rights has been placed on the statute books by the Republican party. There have been many things of interest in the past two years. Before that we had four years of promises, but no fulfillment; it remained for the Republican party to fulfill its promises. I speak more particularly of bridges, roads and schools—particularly the state normal school at New Paltz, and in connection with these matters I want to speak a word of appreciation of the valuable work which was done for this county by its representatives in the assembly. (Applause.)

"One matter which which came up is of particular importance to us—the motor vehicle law, under which this county receives about $16,000 annually and thus the people get the benefit directly of the tax levied on all motor vehicles.

"It is needless for me to contrast the present administration with those which have preceded it. We do not have to hark back very far to find a time when scandal was rampant throughout the state, and the condition which did exist in New York state until the Republican party returned to power is now existent in Washington, but that condition is soon to be abolished. (Applause.)

"This country is going back to the party which means prosperity, the party which means honest government, the party of efficiency. We are going back to the party which stands for Americanism—first, last and all the time; the party which stands for honor at home and abroad, and honor that carries with it the respect not only of our own citizens but of all foreign nations. The responsibility of making this country the leading country in the world rests on you, my friends.

"Certain economic principles are necessary to the success of any nation or any government. It was not until the Democratic party was in the ascendency that we knew in this country what it was to have a war tax without having any war, but the condition was due not only to mismanagement but to misunderstanding of the actual principles and conditions of government." (Applause.)

Convention Adjourns for Dinner.

At 1 o'clock the convention adjourned to accept the invitation of Congressman Ward and the Republican county committee to be their guests at dinner at the Stuyvesant, adjournment being taken until 2:15 o'clock. Owing to the large number at the dinner, some of the delegates were still eating at 3 o'clock and the convention had not yet reassembled.

IN THE STREETS OF CAIRO.

Judge Tompkins Finds Equine Travel Faster Than Gas.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, of Nyack, won the 2:30 trot at Cairo, Greene county, Wednesday with Little Kate. The races were held under the auspices of the Masonic lodges of Greene county. Little Kate trotted 2:25. This is the third race Judge Tompkins has won with Little Kate this season, having won two events in the Orangeburg matinees.

Judge Tompkins and his wife are spending two weeks of their vacation at Lake Minnewaska. Tuesday night the judge had an exciting experience while motoring alone to Cairo. He struck a bad detour during the heavy rain and when his wheel sunk in a mudhole he had to walk a mile to a farmer's house to seek a team to pull the car out.

Smoke!

If a cigarette smoker wishes to give up the practice he should carry a box of crystallized ginger in his pocket. A nip of this aromatic confection will, it is claimed, ward off any tendency to look wistfully upon the enemy. Another help recommended consists of a keepee public school system was re-affirmed with salt and pepper. When that is swallowed, the "kick" it is asserted, will remove the craving for the cigarette.

Mr. Shear Re-engaged.

Sylvester R. Shear for the past six years superintendent of the Poughkeepsie public school system was re-appointed to the position for the 1916-17 school year at a meeting of the education board Wednesday. The election was a formality necessitated by the fact that Mr. Shear's contract with the board had expired.

WALDEN DEFEATED BY MOHONK TEAM

Mohonk Lake, Aug. 10.—The Keen Cutters of Walden were defeated Wednesday 5 to 4 in the best game of the season. The contest lasted ten innings and was interesting throughout. Owl pitched great ball for the home team, keeping the ten hits made off him well scattered and being especially strong in the pinches. Poor support helped the visitors to all their runs and good fielding by Churchill saved the game on two occasions.

Juckett's timely wallop with the bases clogged in the fifth inning, netted three runs and put Mohonk one run to the good. The visitors, however, tied the score in the seventh and there was no more scoring until the tenth when three straight hits, the last one by Owl with a man on third, won the old ball game.

Few hospitals in civilized lands can equal the record of the hospital for eye troubles carried on by H. T. Holland of Shikarpur, India. In one month, 700 operations, largely for cataract, were performed in this institution. Seven hundred outpatients are sometimes treated in a single day. The Sethi Miranand of Shikarpur, a native ruler, has left to the hospital a legacy amounting to about $3,000.

Fair Deal.

The joys, as well as the burdens, of life are pretty evenly divided between the sexes after all, and probably a little girl derives as much innocent pleasure from being a flower girl at a wedding as a little boy does from going to school with a live garter snake in his trousers pocket.—Ohio State Journal.

FARMERS APPLAUD PROTECTION SPEECH

No Uncertainty About Where Hughes Stands on the Tariff and Preparedness—Introduced by Farm Candidate.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 10.—Charles E. Hughes, entering the big agricultural section of the northwest on his presidential campaign tour to the coast, today enthused an audience of 1,500 farmers by a demand for a renewal of the protective tariff.

"I stand for the principle of protection to American interests," the nominee declared. "I believe in protection without abuses and I believe that to be perfectly possible."

Hughes likewise demanded preparedness.

"I stand for preparedness," he said, "for an American ready to meet whatever emergencies we may be called upon to meet. We want peace and good order. We want nothing; we aim at no aggressive policy."

"I stand for the unflinching protection of American rights. We must be able to make good whatever we say in demanding rights we believe just."

American sentiment and justice, he declared, require that we should be ready to carry out our demands.

Lynn J. Frazier, the non-partisan farmers alliance candidate for governor of North Dakota, introduced Mr. Hughes who shook hands with 1,200 people at the Hotel Dakota prior to the meeting.

Mr. Hughes in addition to his remarks on the tariff, agriculture and preparedness also discussed efficiency and economy.

The farmer audience rose unexpectedly to the Hughes demand for national preparedness.

"Weakness in demand breeds insult and insult breeds war," the sentiment was heartily cheered. The Hughes party left at 12:40 p. m. for Fargo.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Joe Lannin sold Tris Speaker for some fifty thousand bones. And now when Joe notes Tris's deeds.

Poor Joe emits some groans. "If Tris were only back again 'lamming the ball for us, 'We'd win with ease,' does mutter Joe.

"Begone! I want to cuss."

Considerable Race Moss.

Single G. the phenomenal pacer of 1916, is looked upon by many experts as one of the few horses which may be able to fracture the 1.55 mark of the late Dan Patch.

The son of Anderson Wilkes upset all calculations for the Grand Circuit during its first meeting in Cleveland when he hung up two new world's records in a three heat race. Pacing in 2:00.4, 2:00.4 and 2:01.4, he fractured all existing average heats for a race, by making the mark 2:00.92-100. Also he broke the world's record for average time for second and third heats by the same horse.

Those who watched single G in his thrilling performance declare that he wasn't called upon to loosen all the wonderful speed in his legs; that he can and will go faster. It that be true, then Single T. ought to come mighty close to Dan Patch's wonderful mark if he ever is turned loose in a fight against time with track and weather conditions in his favor.

Now that Fred Fulton is "heavy-weight champion of the world" (according to Fred Fulton and his manager) what's he gonna do about it?

What Ails Jeff Tesreau?

Has Jeff Tesreau shot his big league bolt?

In 1913 he helped to pitch the Giants into the world series battling by winning 22 out of 35 starts. The following year—1914—he created even a great furor, winning 26 out of 36 games for an average of .722.

Tesreau then was only 25 years old, powerful of physique, and mighty of arm. It seemed almost a certainty that he would be a winning pitcher for many years to come.

But in 1915 he started to skid. He won only 19 out of 35 games, which, in a way, can be regarded as a good showing on a tall end team.

But included among Tesreau's victories were a number of extremely lucky wins. Also, several of the games he was credited with came to him while serving an inning or two as relief heater.

Somewhat or other the 1915 Tesreau wasn't the same "Ozark Bear" of 1913 or 1914. The opposing wall-papers took many liberties with his twisters and quite frequently they drove him to the cooler.

And now, in 1916, with a heavy hitting club behind him, Tesreau continues to flounder along.

He has pitched only two or three really good games this season. His delivery isn't puzzling as of yore. The other fellows gleefully swat his flings to the distant corners of the park.

Is Tesreau, at 27, really through, or is he just in a long slump that all pitchers encounter sooner or later?

A Fable.

Once upon a Time a Baseball Bug went to the Park, purchased a Sack of Peanuts, counted them and discovered more than Twelve Peanuts therein.

Here are seven bits of advice dispensed by Harry Vardon, the English star, to those who aspire to perfection on the links:

"Keep your head still until the club has struck the ball.

"Don't be afraid to hit hard if you are swinging correctly.

"Let the movement of your swinging shoulder be steady and rhythmic; don't jerk.

"Keep the head steady. Do not let the left heel turn outward—then the body can only wind up when the arms go back.

"Grip firm with the thumbs and forefingers—they are not so well adapted as the other fingers to the purpose of taking a strong hold, and they are the most important of all for the purpose of the golf grip.

"Let the club head lead, the left wrist turning inward, the arms following the club head and the right hip screwing next.

"Don't throw the arms forward as you start to come down as though you were mowing grass. Rather throw them back, and let them come round in their own way from that point.

Peace—And J. Evers.

The rumor which gained circulation last week that Henry Ford had named Johnny Evers as a member of his Peace Committee has not been confirmed as yet.

"I haven't heard about it yet," said Mr. Evers, when approached on the subject. "But I feel worthy of—hey! gimme a bat—no, make it two bats and a cannon. There goes an umpire."

Walsh in New Rescue Role.

El Walsh, who used to save games for the White Sox, now is saving women.

The other day the one-time spitball king heard slicks emerge from Lake Michigan. Into the brineless deep dived Eddie Walsh and in less than five minutes he fished out two girls from drowning after their raft was upset.

Filial Affection.

At a wine party of young men at one of the colleges, notes of apology were handed in from two of the proposed guests, who were unable to attend owing to the death of their father.

A young gentleman, heir to a considerable property, who had been partaking freely of the hospitalities of the festive board, suddenly burst into tears.

"Was this dear old gentleman a friend of yours?" asked the sympathetic host.

"No, no, it's not that," sobbed the guest. "Only—I was just thinking—everybody's father dies but mine."
